(U) Placerville—Local ‘Tax Defiers’ Cheated IRS Out of Millions, Prosecutors Say

(U) A Placerville business that represents tax defiers—people who question the legitimacy of the US revenue collection system—is at the center of a tax-fraud scheme that IRS officials began investigating in the fall of 2008, according to federal prosecutors. The scheme involved sovereign citizens who issued financial instruments through their own common-law court towards officials and prosecutors who found themselves bombarded with multimillion-dollar liens allegedly filed by the people under investigation. The loss is estimated to be close to $9 million and involves districts from all over the country, says Assistant US Attorney Matthew Segal.

(U) Florida—Three New Cases of Local Zika Transmission; US Funding for Fighting Zika Nearly Spent

(U) Miami-Dade County—Florida health officials yesterday said they were investigating three new Zika virus cases likely stemming from local mosquito bites in Miami-Dade County, including two cases outside of the known areas of active transmission. Meanwhile, the director of the CDC warned that federal funds of $222 million to fight the Zika virus were nearly exhausted. About $35 million of the $194 million spent on Zika had been allocated to Florida, which has used a majority of it on mosquito eradication. The new infections bring the state's total of non-travel-related cases to 46, according to the Florida Department of Health.
